CITY LABOR BUREAU FAILS TO OPEN, DUE TO AGE OF SEARS

Hundreds Seeking Jobs Vainly
Storm New City Department in Rain.

Hundreds of rain-soaked men and women in search of employment streamed in a steady line to the Municipal Employment Bureau at Lafayette and Leonard streets only to be informed the Bureau would not open to-day, as promised by the City.

While Chamberlain Henry Bruere, License Commissioner George H. Bell and the Civil Service Commissioners put their heads together to untangle the problem of the directgraph of the Bureau, Walter Lincoln Sears, who was brought on from Boston to take charge, remained on the job.

The applicants were told to come back Thursday morning, when, it is expected, everything will be straightened out and the Bureau will at last be able to aid the great army of unemployed. Many of those turned away were girls seeking temporary employment making Christmas cards or similar work.

Through another hitch, following on the heels of the announcement of the Civil Service Commission that Mr. Sears is past the age limit for the superintendency, only one clerk of a dozen transferred to the new Bureau from other departments, put in an appearance. The best explanation Mrs. Sears could offer was that their transfers had not been approved by their former department heads although, as long ago as last Wednesday Commissioner Bell affixed his O. K. to the transfers.

The trouble over the directorship which is keeping thousands out of employment indefinitely, started when the Civil Service Commission advertised for a competitive examination to fill the post of superintendent, fixing the age limit at fifty years. Sears is fifty-one. It makes no difference to the Civil Service Commission that Mr. Bruere and the Mayor are personally interested in having Mr. Sears in charge. In the meantime Mr. Sears seems to appreciate I am ineligible for the competitive examination," he said today. "I gave up a good position in Boston to come here and organize this bureau. Under the circumstances all I can do is remain as provisional head pending the outcome of the competitive test."

Point of View

If a man should slip and fall on a New York street there would be some to scream, some to laugh, some to run to his assistance, while others would hurry on their way looking after their own affairs.

And so it is in man's struggle for success and the comforts in life. Some give up and bemoan their fate, some struggle but in wrong directions, some simply "don't care" and never know what prosperity means, while others—the thoughtful, the wise and the ambitious—use their brains.
